The work of "repatriating" the Spanish prisoners at Santiago begins make better progress. The Isla de Luon board, and two other transports will begin loading to-day.

The conclusion of peace negotiations also stopped a battle between General Wilson's troops and an intrenched Spanish force near Aibonito. The Spansh position was almost impregnable from the front, but could have been

The news of peace reached Guayama just in time to prevent a battle. Everything was in readiness for an attack on the Spanish, and a Pennsylvanis battery was just about to open fire, when an orderly galloped up with the news that war was over. The soldiers groaned in disgust.

Gen. Blanco telegraphs to Madrid that Havana is greatly agitated over the signing of the protocol, and is anxions to know all the terms. Blanco and Macias have acknowledged the receipt of orders directing a suspension of hostilities, and announced that they have acted accordingly.

Five regiments of immues will be at Santiago when the last of Gen. Shafter's army leaves, and it is believed that force will be sufficient for the present. They will be under command of Gen. Lawton. Gen. Miles has 15 .-000 men in Porto Rico and Gen. Merritt has about 16,000 at Manila, or will have when the troops now on the way reach him. There will be no increase of any of these forces for the present,

A Madrid dispatch to the London Times says that, although some Spaniards are still apprehensive of a Cabinet crisis, such a development would not seriously affect peace negotiations, as Sagasta is sure to have his way. There The Spanish people generally are pleased that the war is over, although they for the war. The Spanish press, howtion of the Spanish colonial empire
